INTRODUCTION

This National Council For Adoption (NCFA) research report presents data on the number of adoptions in the United States in 2019 and 2020. Data on the number of private domestic adoptions, intercountry adoptions, and adoptions from foster care are compiled in aggregate as well as at the state level, thus providing an estimate of the total number of adoptions in the United States.

The primary contribution of this report is to provide an estimate of the number of private domestic adoptions in the United States—information not otherwise reported on by any government or non-governmental organization. As such, this report focuses on the methodology, findings, discussion, and policy considerations impacting private domestic adoption. Knowing the number of private domestic adoptions can serve as a foundation for researchers seeking to better understand private domestic adoption trends in this country. It can also provide an important reference point for policymakers as they consider legislation in this area.

Collection of data on private domestic adoption is complex. No federal bureaucracy tracks or gathers state-level data on private adoptions, and many states do not routinely report or aggregate such information, though some scholars have reported estimates on the total number of adoptions in previous years.¹ Some state court systems commingle all private adoptions, including stepparent adoptions, while others track types of adoptions in discrete categories. Further complicating the process, some state and county court systems report adoption filings or hearings, but not finalizations. Nonetheless, many states were able to provide partial or full responses to NCFA's survey instrument (see Appendix B). Additional information was obtained directly from various sources including State Bureaus of Vital Records, State Courts, and States' Departments of Social Services.

The decision to present data from both 2019 and 2020 was both practical and purposive. Practically, it is easier to collect two years of data at once, rather than at two separate times. Additionally, collecting data from both years presented an opportunity to reflect on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on adoptions in the United States, documenting what practitioners had reported during this time; many noted significant declines in the number of adoptions.

This report also provides historical information on the number of reported adoptions in the United States, which allows for a presentation of trends by adoption type as well as an aggregate estimate at various points in time. Intercountry adoption data are presented from fiscal year (FY) 2014 through FY 2020. Trends in private domestic adoption rely upon past research estimates made by NCFA at various intervals in recent decades. These previous efforts utilized a different methodology to estimate state-level data. While the general trend data is reliable, it should be noted as a limitation that the most recent data point relies upon a new approach to estimating this information.

DATA COLLECTION METHODS

National Council For Adoption periodically publishes a comprehensive report of U.S. adoption statistics. With continued commitment to this work, in spring 2021 NCFCA convened a research team consisting of members from NCFCA and Center for the Advancement of Children, Youth, and Families at The Catholic University of America.

After a review of the survey instrument NCFCA used to collect 2014 U.S. adoption data,² the research team updated and finalized the survey instrument for the current report (see Appendix B). While the survey inquired about the statistics on both public and private adoptions in the U.S., it mainly focused on private adoptions because information on public adoptions is readily available through the federal government’s Adoption and Foster Care Analysis and Reporting System (AFCARS).³ In addition to the total number of adoptions in a given year, the survey asked about the number of kin and non-kin adoptions, and the number of adoptions that qualified for an adoption subsidy.

Upon the finalization of the survey instrument, the research team reached out to representatives from 50 states and the District of Columbia from June 2021 to February 2022. Initial contacts were made to the representatives identified for the previous report in 2017. In many instances, the contact information needed to be updated as some individuals were no longer with the state agencies. If the research team did not receive a response from representatives in a state, additional contacts were made with other staff/offices in that state. The majority of the contacts were made with staff/offices in state departments responsible for children and family services, vital statistics offices, and the family court system.

The state representatives were asked to fill out the survey and provide statistics for 2019 and 2020. In response to anecdotal data that indicated major shifts in the adoption landscape due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, the decision was made to collect data for both 2019 and 2020. The state representatives were asked to specify whether the provided information was based on their fiscal year or calendar year.

For the number of private adoptions, this report relied on sources in addition to the survey completed by the state representatives. A major source of information was statistics on state court caseloads that are available through the Court Statistics Project (CSP). States provide aggregated caseload data to CSP annually. CSP data may differ from what states report in other documents due to the data transformation CSP makes for cross-state comparisons.⁴

For the number of children adopted through the public child welfare system (i.e., public adoption), the report referred to the estimates that the federal government reports from the AFCARS. State and Tribal child welfare agencies are required every six months to report to the AFCARS case-level information on all children who were placed in foster care and who were adopted with the involvement of public child welfare agencies.⁵

For the number of intercountry adoptions, the research team utilized the data collected and reported by the U.S. Department of State.⁶ In addition to intercountry adoptions in the 50 states and District of Columbia, the original data by the U.S. Department of State included adoptions by Americans overseas as well as those in Federated States of Micronesia, Guam, Marshall Islands, Puerto Rico, and Virgin Islands. As the numbers for Federated States of Micronesia, Guam, Marshall Islands, Puerto Rico, and Virgin Islands were often missing for multiple years, this report excluded the number of intercountry adoptions in these territories.

The research team conducted additional searches, mainly through publicly available data (i.e., websites) of state governmental agencies and courts, and obtained information on the number of adoptions. The detailed information on data sources is presented for each state (see Appendix A).

CHANGE IN METHODOLOGY FROM PREVIOUS ESTIMATES

NCFA's previous estimates on the number of private domestic adoptions relied on a different methodology to collect and report data. The survey instrument utilized for this report simplified the reporting from states, while also asking for two years of data. Previous reporting by NCFA highlighted unrelated domestic adoption of infants as an indication of private domestic adoption. In this previous methodology, it would include infant adoptions from the public system while excluding private adoptions by relatives. Alternatively, this report presents private domestic adoptions separate from those from the public system but is inclusive of relative adoptions (except for stepparents) and private domestic placements of non-infants.

DATA ANALYTIC METHODS

The report primarily relied on the data from the returned instrument. When there were multiple sources of data, the research team checked the consistency of the figures. When the figures were consistent, survey data was used over data from other sources in most cases. However, when there were significant differences in the figures across sources, the research team examined additional information to determine the final figure for a given state. For example, the research team examined the trends of public adoption for a given state using AFCARS data. The team also looked at the prior trends of the total number of adoptions for a given state, based on information available in previous reports.⁷

It was often the case that the survey data was incomplete with many fields missing. While most states that responded to the survey instrument provided the number of public adoptions, many did not report the number of total adoptions and/or private adoptions. When states only provided the total number of adoptions along with the number of public adoptions, the number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total adoptions. Similarly, when states only reported the number of private adoptions along with the number of public adoptions, the total number of adoptions was computed by adding the number of private and public adoptions.

Sometimes, the research team had to rely on multiple sources for the number of private, public, and/or total adoptions. Many of these sources would use timeframes that were not consistent (e.g., calendar year vs. state fiscal year vs. federal fiscal year). For example, the total number of adoptions available from the CSP data for a given state was based on a calendar year, whereas AFCARS offered the figures for the number of public adoptions for a federal fiscal year. The majority of figures from the NCEA survey were based on a state fiscal year. In such circumstances, the computation was based on the figures where there was significant timeframe overlap. In the above example, the number of private adoptions was computed using CSP and AFCARS data where AFCARS data was used instead of the survey data for the number of public adoptions. This is because the federal fiscal year aligns more closely with the calendar year than the state fiscal year. Detailed information on how the research team estimated the number of private, public, and total adoptions is provided for each state (see Appendix A).

The estimate for stepparent adoptions was computed using the figures available for a small number of states. Only 10 states and the District of Columbia reported the number of stepparent adoptions in the survey. One state reported zero stepparent adoptions and was excluded from the computation. The average percentage of stepparent adoptions was calculated with the figures from the remaining nine states and the District of Columbia, and applied to the total number of private adoptions in the U.S.

FINDINGS

The findings in this section focus on the estimates for the U.S. A state-by-state analysis and its findings are presented in Appendix A.

TOTAL NUMBER OF DOMESTIC ADOPTIONS

It was estimated that 115,353 children were adopted in the U.S. in 2019. Public adoptions made up about 57% of the total domestic adoptions in 2019, and the remaining 43% were private adoptions. This estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions is higher than estimates reported for previous years.^{8,9} This is due to the increased number of public adoptions.

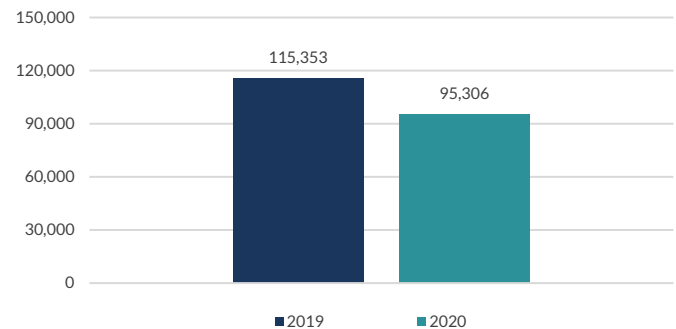

The total number of domestic adoptions decreased significantly in 2020. It was estimated that 95,306 children were adopted in the U.S. in 2020, which is about a 17% decrease from 2019. Public adoptions comprised 58% of the total domestic adoptions in 2020, and private adoptions made up 42%. A decrease in the number of adoptions was observed in all states and the District of Columbia except for one state, South Dakota. In South Dakota, the total number of domestic adoptions increased by 4% from 2019 to 2020.

PRIVATE DOMESTIC ADOPTIONS

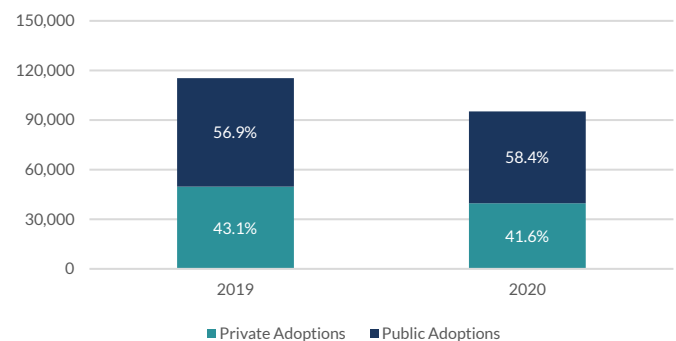

It was estimated that 49,771 children were adopted outside the public child welfare system in 2019. Close to half of these private adoptions (48%) were by stepparents. This estimate for the total number of private adoptions is lower than estimates reported for previous years, which was close to 60,000.^{10,11}

The total number of private adoptions dropped significantly from 2019 to 2020. In 2020, the number of private adoptions was estimated to be 39,601, a 20% decrease from 2019. Among these private adoptions, half (50%) were by stepparents.

PUBLIC DOMESTIC ADOPTIONS

While NCFA collected data on public adoptions in 2019 and 2020, the research team relied on AFCARS data in order to examine the long-term trends. It is estimated that 66,087 children were adopted through the public child welfare system in the U.S. in FY 2019. This is an approximately 5% increase from FY 2018 when 63,008 children were reported to have been adopted from foster care.

The increased number of public adoptions from FY 2018 to FY 2019 was observed in 35 states while the number decreased in 15 states and the District of Columbia.

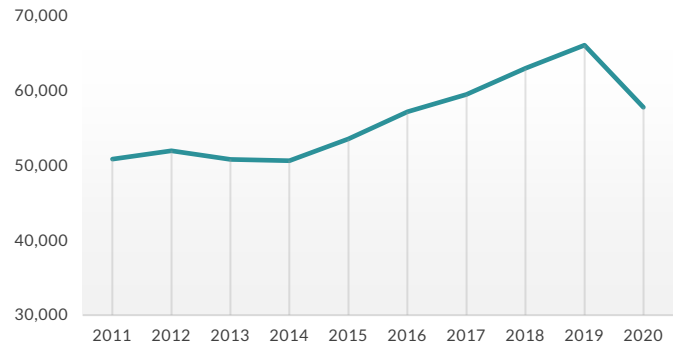

The number of children who were adopted through the public child welfare system significantly dropped in FY 2020, compared to FY 2019. Nationally, the number of public adoptions decreased by 13% from FY 2019 to FY 2020. The reduced number of public adoptions was observed in 39 states, while the number increased in nine states. The number of children adopted from the public child welfare system remained the same between FY 2019 and FY 2020 in two states and the District of Columbia.

INTERCOUNTRY ADOPTIONS

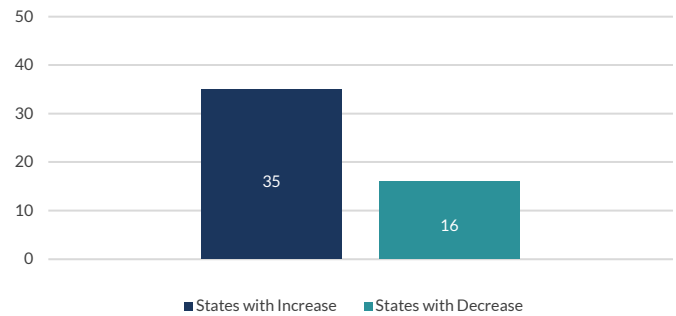

There were 2,969 intercountry adoptions in FY 2019, a 27% decrease from FY 2018 when 4,057 intercountry adoptions were reported. This pattern was observed for most states, and only six states reported an increased number of intercountry adoptions in FY 2019. The number of intercountry adoptions remained the same between FY 2018 and FY 2019 in North Dakota.

The number of intercountry adoptions continued to decrease in FY 2020. There were 1,622 intercountry adoptions, a 45% decrease from FY 2019. Only three states reported an increased number of intercountry adoptions in FY 2020, and the number remained the same in Rhode Island.

IMPACT OF COVID-19

The COVID-19 pandemic upended nearly every aspect of life in the United States, and child welfare is not an exception. While federal government reports have shown a decline in adoptions from foster care as well as in intercountry adoptions, this report is the first to document a national decline in private domestic adoptions as well. This finding is consistent with practitioner reports from the field, who report fewer expectant parents requesting adoption counseling and fewer placements made with involvement by agencies and attorneys.

Adoptions declined dramatically between 2019 and 2020 (see Table 1). Private domestic, non-stepparent adoptions declined 24%, intercountry adoptions declined 45%, and adoptions from foster care declined 13%. By comparison, live births in the United States dropped 4% in 2020, totaling 3,613,647.¹²

Comparing the impact of Covid-19 on different types of adoptions is problematic. For example, it is possible that the decline in FY 2020 reflects delayed adoptions that ultimately happened after this reporting period – and subsequent years will show a catch-up. That is more likely true for adoptions from public child welfare system and intercountry placements – but unlikely to be true for private domestic adoptions.

Comparisons between types of adoption may also be challenging due to differences in reporting periods. Both intercountry adoption and adoption from public child welfare system are reported in the federal fiscal year, while many states report data based upon either their state fiscal year or calendar year. Therefore, comparison between types of adoption may be comparing timeframes that were impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic for a longer period.

The fact that different fiscal years were reported is not the only factor confounding comparison. For instance, intercountry adoptions from China ceased well before pandemic shutdowns in the United States, so the negative impact of the pandemic on intercountry adoption was present for a greater portion of FY 2020 than for other types of adoption.

POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

State and federal policymakers have the capacity to support the provision of ethical adoptions by promulgating legislation and regulations that focus on evidence-based, high quality service provision.

FEDERAL REPORTING OF PRIVATE DOMESTIC ADOPTIONS

Information about the number of private domestic adoptions can allow researchers to better understand trends in the field and provide policymakers with accurate information for creating policies impacting vulnerable populations. Currently, the federal government tracks and reports on the number of intercountry adoptions each year as well as the number of adoptions from public child welfare system.

Adding a requirement for states to report on the number of private domestic adoptions would provide policymakers with meaningful information. This requirement can be added to statewide automated child welfare information systems (SACWIS) in compliance with requirements of the Adoption and Foster Care Analysis Reporting System (AFCARS). This information can, and should, track whether the placement is made to a relative, a stepparent, or unrelated parents.

DISCRETIONARY FUNDING TO SUPPORT ADOPTION-INFORMED EDUCATION

Inaccurate information about adoption may be a significant reason why expectant/birth parents do not consider adoption among their options. States and the federal government can fund education for health care workers, social workers, and other professionals who are likely to be in roles of communication and support for expectant/birth parents. Additionally, public schools can include fact-based information about adoption in sexual health education curricula, including information about the rights expectant/birth parents have in choosing the adoptive parents as well as the frequency of open, ongoing relationships between birth parents and adoptive families.

SUPPORT FOR ADOPTION SERVICE PROVIDERS IMPACTED BY COVID-19

The community of licensed professional adoption agencies and other adoption service providers has been significantly impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. Focused support for licensed child-placement organizations relies on the experienced cadre of professionals equipped to serve expectant parents, birth parents, adopted individuals, and adoptive families. Such support can be provided by state and federal grants, free or reduced cost training opportunities for these professionals, and in the case of intercountry agencies, reduced accreditation fees.

APPENDIX A: STATE-LEVEL DATA

This section provides estimates for the number of adoptions as well as information on data sources for each state.

ALABAMA

In Alabama, the total number of domestic adoptions was 1,778 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 59% of the total number of domestic adoptions. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 2% in 2020, with 1,741 domestic adoptions that year. Fifty-three percent were private adoptions, and public adoptions comprised 47% of the total number of domestic adoptions.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions in Alabama continued to increase in 2019 and 2020. In 2019, 738 children were adopted from foster care, which was a 4% increase compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care increased by 11% in 2020, with 816 public adoptions that year.

In 2019, there were 63 intercountry adoptions in Alabama, a 45% decrease from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions continued to decline in 2020, with 55 intercountry adoptions, which was a 13% decrease compared to 2019.

As Alabama did not return the survey, the number of public adoptions was obtained from their Department of Human Resources annual report.¹³ The total number of domestic adoptions was estimated based on the number of disposed domestic cases.¹⁴ Based on the figures from prior years,^{15,16} the percentage of adoption cases was calculated and applied in the estimation of the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

ALASKA

In Alaska, the total number of domestic adoptions was 492 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 24% of the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of domestic adoptions declined by 2% in 2020, with 483 domestic adoptions that year. Twenty-nine percent were private adoptions, and public adoptions comprised 71% of domestic adoptions.

It was estimated that 38% of private adoptions were by stepparents in 2019, with 45 stepparent adoptions within private adoptions. The number of stepparent adoptions was estimated to be 44 in 2020, making up 32% of private adoptions.

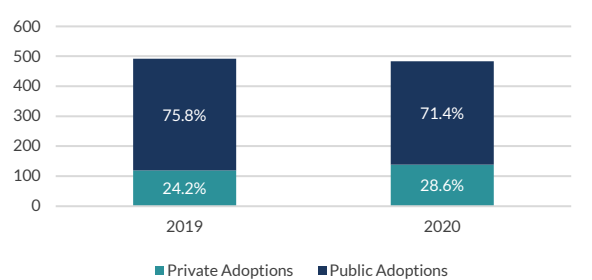

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions in Alaska was 396 in 2019, a 12% increase compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care decreased by 11% in 2020, with 354 public adoptions that year.

In 2019, there were eight intercountry adoptions in Alaska, a 38% decrease from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions continued to decline in 2020, with only two intercountry adoptions that year, which was a 75% decrease compared to 2019.

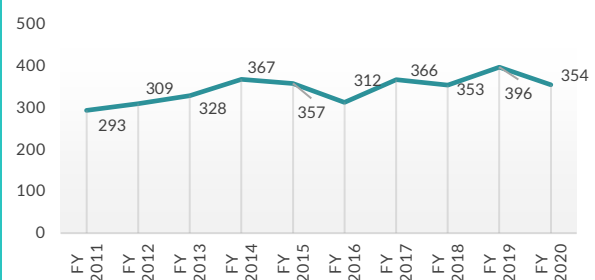

The Alaska court system returned the survey, providing the total number of adoptions granted and the number of stepparent adoptions for each state fiscal year (SFY). The number of public adoptions was provided by the Office of Children's Services. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

The survey response indicated that there were 187 stepparent adoptions in 2019 and 140 in 2020. Since these figures were larger than the computed figures for private adoptions, it was assumed that they were the number of stepparent adoptions out of all domestic adoptions. The percentage of stepparent adoptions was calculated and applied to the total number of private adoptions.

ARIZONA

In Arizona, the total number of domestic adoptions was 3,433 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 6% of domestic adoptions. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 21% in 2020. There were 2,725 domestic adoptions in 2020.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 3,373 in 2019. This was a 14% decrease compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care further declined by 14% in 2020: 2,905 children were adopted from foster care in 2020.

In 2019, there were 25 intercountry adoptions in Arizona, which was a 40% decrease from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions continued to decline in 2020: there were 21 intercountry adoptions, which was a 16% decrease compared to 2019.

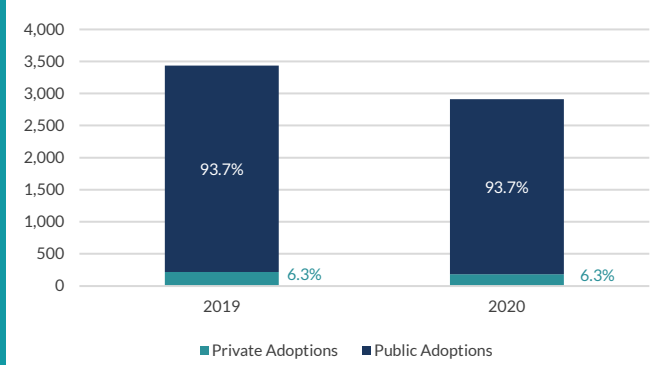

Arizona did not return the survey, and this report used the number of outgoing cases reported by CSP¹⁷ as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions in 2019. The number of public adoptions in 2019 was obtained from the Arizona Department of Child Safety (DCS) semi-annual child welfare reports.¹⁸ The number of private adoptions in 2019 was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

The number of outgoing cases reported by CSP was 2,656 in 2020. This was larger than the number of public adoptions the Arizona DCS reported for 2020, which was 2,725. As a result, the research team decided to apply the ratio of private to public adoptions in 2019 in its estimation of the number of private adoptions in 2020. The total number of domestic adoptions in 2020 was computed by adding up the number of private and public adoptions.

ARKANSAS

In Arkansas, the total number of domestic adoptions was 2,266 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 57% of domestic adoptions. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 13% in 2020: there were 1,968 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 64% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 36%.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 984 in 2019. This was a 2% decline compared to 2018. The number of public adoptions continued to drop in 2020, with 777 children were adopted from foster care, which was a 21% decrease from 2019.

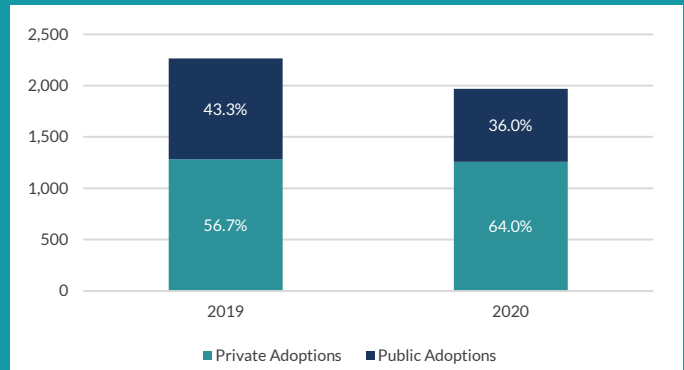

In 2019, there were three intercountry adoptions in Arkansas, which was a 90% decrease from 2018. The number increased in 2020 with eight intercountry adoptions reported.

Arkansas only provided the number of public adoptions through the survey instrument. Both the Division of Children and Family Services (DCFS) and the Office of Research and Justice Statistics (ORJS) presented the number of public adoptions.

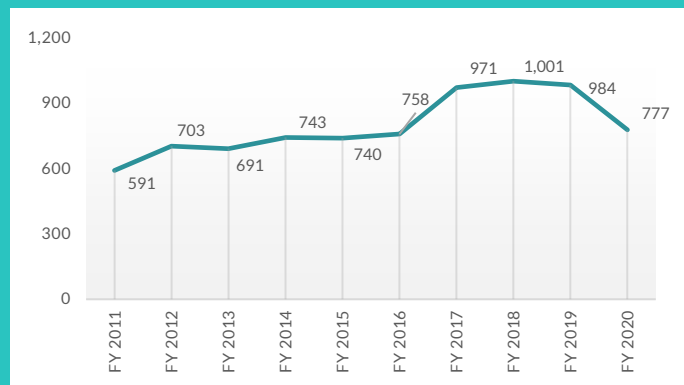

This report used the number of dispositions reported by CSP¹⁹ as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. Since this figure was based on a calendar year, the report used the number of public adoptions submitted by ORJS, which was for a given calendar year. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

Note. a. The number of domestic adoptions was also obtained from the Arkansas Judiciary Annual Summary (https://public.tableau.com/app/profile/orjs.arcourts/viz/AR_Annual_Summary_Public_o/Dashboard1). According to the report, there were 2,284 adoptions in July 2018 - June 2019, and 1,976 in July 2019 - June 2020. b. According to DCFS, the number of public adoptions was 950 in 2019 and 872 in 2020, which was based on the state fiscal year.

CALIFORNIA

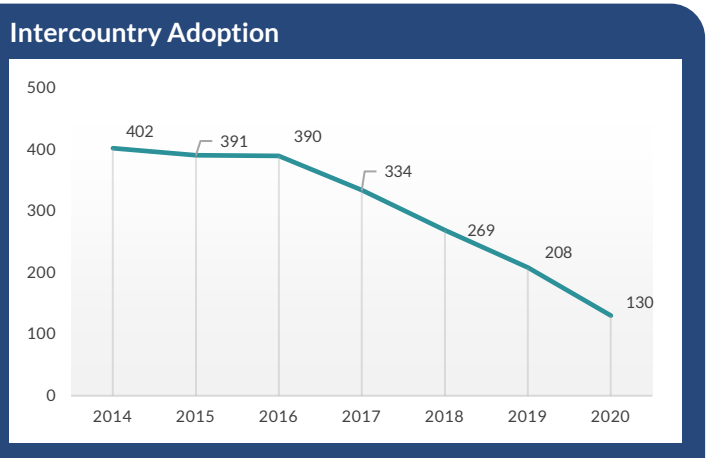

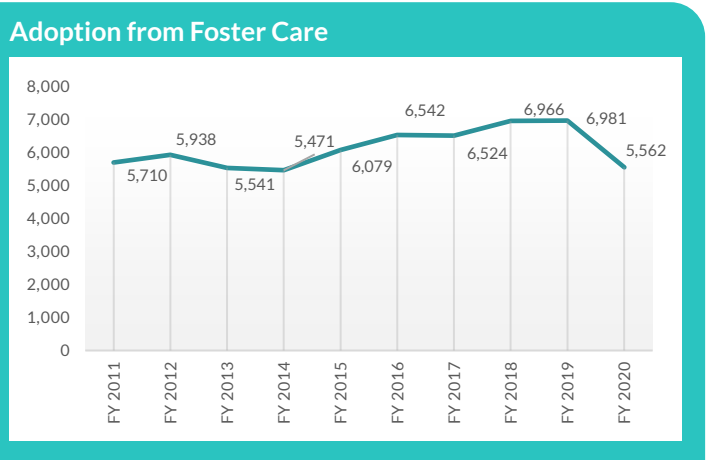

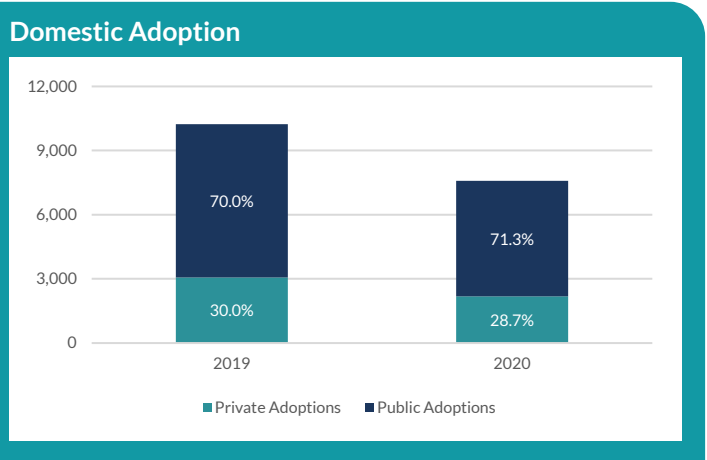

In California, the total number of domestic adoptions was estimated to be 10,223 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 30% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 70%. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 26% in 2020: there were 7,575 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 29% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 71%.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 6,981 in 2019. This was almost the same as in 2018 when there were 6,966 public adoptions. The number of public adoptions decreased in 2020: 5,562 children were adopted from foster care, which was a 20% decrease from 2019.

In 2019, there were 208 intercountry adoptions in California, which was a 23% decrease from 2018. The number continued to decline in 2020: there were 130 intercountry adoptions in 2020, which was a 38% decrease from 2019.

California only provided the number of public adoptions in their returned survey. Both the Department of Social Services and the Department of Public Health submitted the number of public adoptions, which was from the California Child Welfare Indicators Project (<https://ccwip.berkeley.edu/>).

For the total number of domestic adoptions, the research team reached out to each of the state's 58 superior courts, and received a response from 36 of them. The child population in the 36 counties was divided by the child population of California to calculate the proportion between the child population in these counties and the child population of the entire state. This proportion was used to estimate the total number of domestic adoptions in California by dividing the total number of adoptions reported in these 36 counties by the calculated proportion. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

	Domestic Adoptions	Domestic Private Adoptions	Domestic Public Adoptions	AFCARS	Intercountry Adoptions
2019	10,223	3,062	7,161	6,981	208
2020	7,575	2,175	5,400	5,562	130

COLORADO

In Colorado, the total number of domestic adoptions was estimated to be 2,487 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 63% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 37%. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 12% in 2020: there were 2,189 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 62% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 38%.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 919 in 2019. This was almost the same as in 2018 when there were 910 public adoptions. The number of public adoptions declined in 2020: 832 children were adopted from foster care, which was a 9% decrease from 2019.

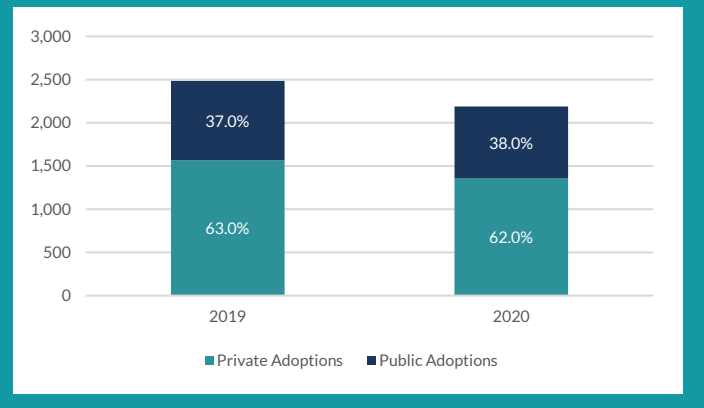

In 2019, there were 80 intercountry adoptions in Colorado, which was a 40% decrease from 2018. The number continued to decline in 2020: there were 42 intercountry adoptions in 2020, which was a 48% decrease from 2019.

The Office of Children, Youth and Family Services under the Colorado Department of Human Services returned the survey. However, it was decided that this report would not use the numbers provided in the survey because the total number of domestic adoptions from the survey was smaller than the number of public adoptions reported in AFCARS data.

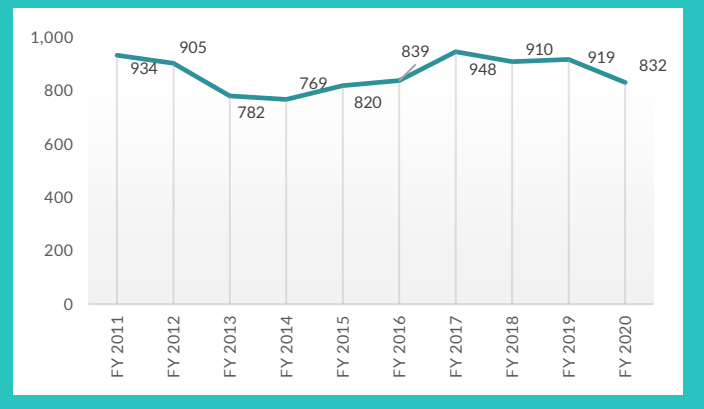

This report used the number of incoming cases reported by CSP²⁰ as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of public adoptions was based on AFCARS data. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

Note. According to the returned survey, the total number of private adoptions was 268 and the total number of public adoptions was 623 in 2019 with the total number of domestic adoptions being 891. The survey reported that the total number of domestic adoptions was 756 in 2020 when there were 214 private adoptions and 551 public adoptions.

CONNECTICUT

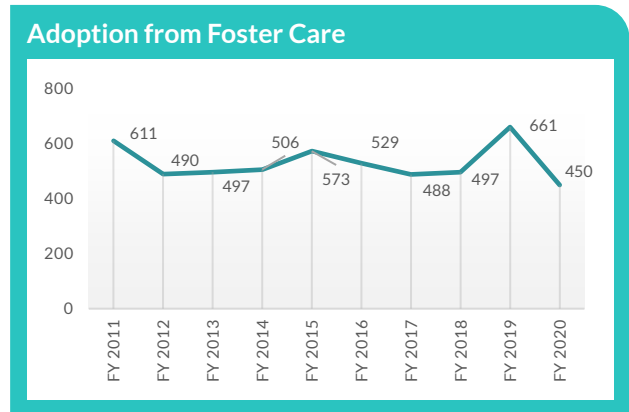

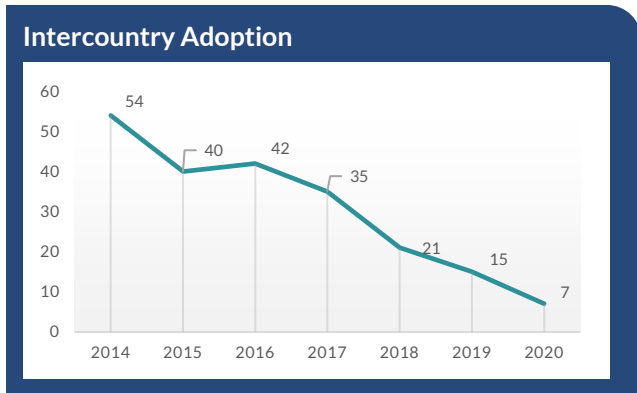

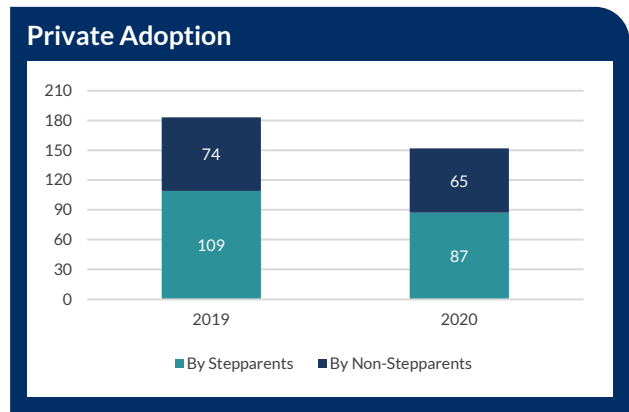

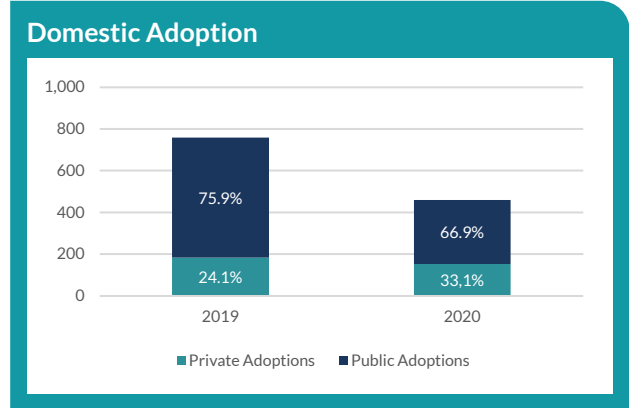

In Connecticut, the total number of domestic adoptions was 759 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 24% of the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of domestic adoptions declined by 40% in 2020: there were 459 domestic adoptions in 2020. Thirty-three percent of them were private adoptions, and public adoptions comprised 67% of domestic adoptions.

In 2019, 60% of private adoptions were by stepparents: there were 109 stepparent adoptions within private adoptions. The number of stepparent adoptions was reported to be 87 in 2020, making up 57% of private adoptions.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 661 in 2019, which was a 33% increase compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care decreased by 32% in 2020: there were 450 public adoptions in 2020.

In 2019, there were 15 intercountry adoptions in Connecticut, which was a 29% decrease from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions continued to decline in 2020: there were seven intercountry adoptions, which was a 53% decrease compared to 2019.

The State of Connecticut Judicial Branch and Connecticut Probate Court returned the survey, providing the number of domestic adoptions, private adoptions, and stepparent adoptions for each calendar year. The number of public adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of private adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

DELAWARE

In Delaware, the total number of domestic adoptions was 252 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 49% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 51%. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 38% in 2020: there were 156 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 26% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 74%.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 129 in 2019. This was an 11% increase from 2018 when there were 116 public adoptions. The number of public adoptions declined in 2020: 116 children were adopted from foster care, which was a 10% decrease from 2019.

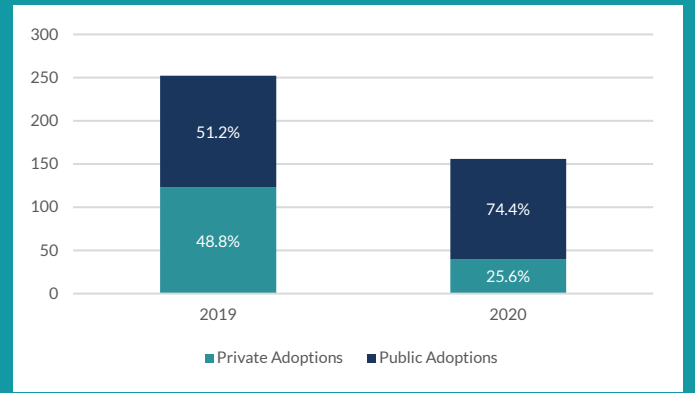

In 2019, there were four intercountry adoptions in Delaware, which was a 43% decrease from 2018. The number continued to decline in 2020: there were only two intercountry adoptions in 2020, which was a 50% decrease from 2019.

Delaware only provided the number of public adoptions in their returned survey. The Delaware Division of Family Services submitted the number of public adoptions, which was based on each calendar year.

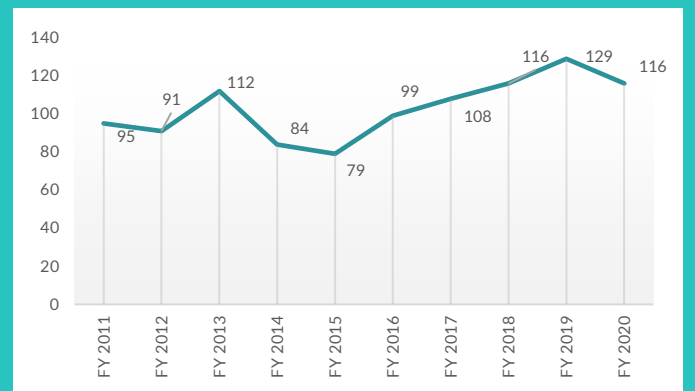

This report used the number of disposed cases, which was obtained from the Administrative Office of the Courts²¹, as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. Since this number was based on the state fiscal year, the research team decided to use the figures reported in AFCARS data, instead of the numbers submitted in the survey, as its estimate for the total number of public adoptions. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

Note. According to the returned survey, the total number of public adoptions was 133 in 2019, and 82 in 2020.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

In the District of Columbia, the total number of domestic adoptions was 192 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 49% of the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of domestic adoptions declined by 10% in 2020: there were 172 domestic adoptions in 2020. Forty-three percent of them were private adoptions, and public adoptions comprised 57% of domestic adoptions.

It was estimated that 50% of private adoptions were by stepparents in 2019: there were 47 stepparent adoptions within private adoptions. The number of stepparent adoptions was estimated to be 31 in 2020, making up 42% of private adoptions.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 98 in 2019, which was about the same as in 2018 when there were 100 public adoptions. The number of children adopted from foster care remained the same in 2020: there were 98 public adoptions in 2020.

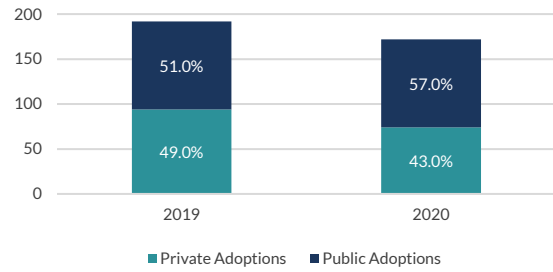

In 2019, there were 10 intercountry adoptions in the District of Columbia, which was a 17% decrease from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions continued to decline in 2020: there were seven intercountry adoptions, which was a 30% decrease compared to 2019.

The Office of the General Council returned the survey, providing the total number of domestic adoptions, private adoptions, stepparent adoptions, and public adoptions. However, the total number of domestic adoptions from the survey appeared to be overly underestimated, compared to the estimates reported for prior years. The research team decided to use the number of outgoing cases reported by CSP²² as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of public adoptions was based on AFCARS data. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

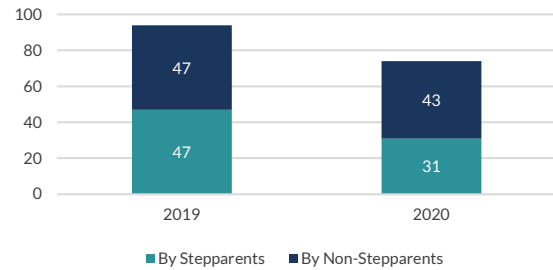

From the returned survey, the percentage of stepparent adoptions over private adoptions was computed. This percentage was applied to the computed number of private adoptions.

Note. According to the returned survey, the total number of private adoptions was 10 in 2019. The total number of domestic adoptions and public adoptions was not provided for 2019. The survey reported that the total number of domestic adoptions was 110 in 2020 when there were 12 private adoptions and 98 public adoptions. The survey indicated that the number of stepparent adoptions was five in both 2019 and 2020.

FLORIDA

In Florida, the total number of domestic adoptions was estimated to be 6,733 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 32% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 68%. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 13% in 2020: there were 5,859 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 32% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 68%.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 4,714 in 2019. This was a 6% increase from 2018 when there were 4,455 public adoptions. The number of public adoptions declined slightly in 2020: 4,534 children were adopted from foster care, which was a 4% decrease from 2019.

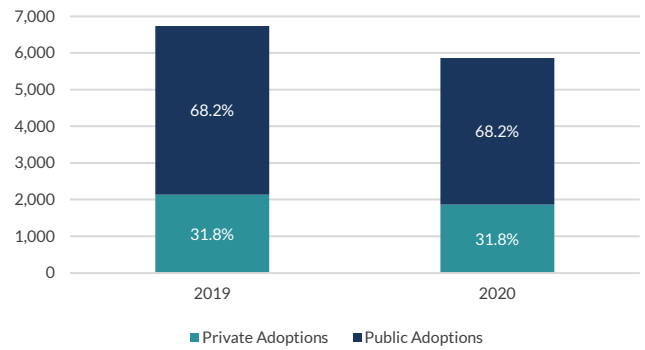

In 2019, there were 146 intercountry adoptions in Florida, which was a 20% decrease from 2018. The number continued to decline in 2020: there were 83 intercountry adoptions in 2020, which was a 43% decrease from 2019.

Florida only provided the number of public adoptions in their returned survey. The Office of the State Courts Administrator submitted the number of public adoptions, which was based on each calendar year.

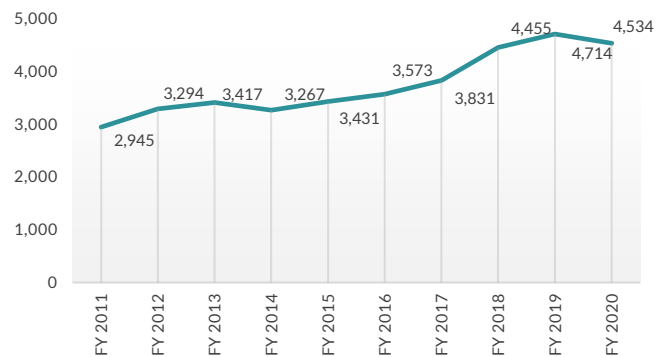

For the total number of domestic adoptions, the research team initially reached out to the 20 judicial courts in the Florida Courts. A few of the judicial courts were able to provide data for all of the counties in their jurisdiction, while several others redirected the research team to the individual county clerks of court. In the end, after contacting judicial court public information officers and county clerks of court, data for 32 of the 67 counties in the state was received.

The proportion of child population in these 32 counties over the entire state was calculated (i.e., child population in the 32 counties divided by child population in the state). This proportion was applied in estimating the total number of domestic adoptions in Florida, using the total number of adoptions reported for the 32 counties (i.e., total number of adoptions in the 32 counties divided by the calculated proportion). The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

IDAHO

In Idaho, the total number of domestic adoptions was 874 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 63% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 38%. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 11% in 2020: there were 779 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 55% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 45%.

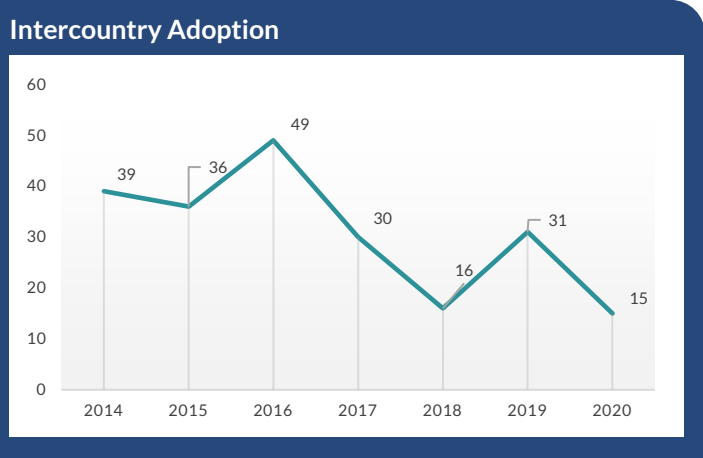

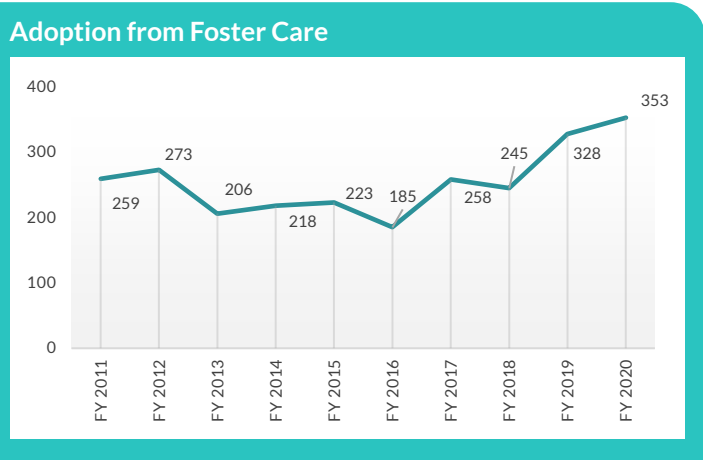

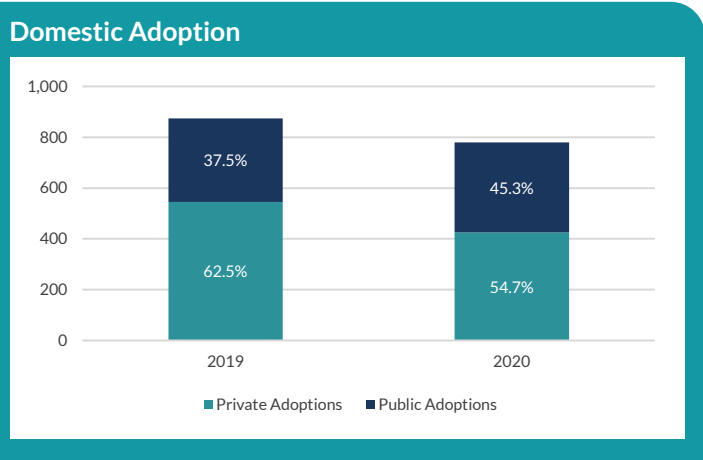

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 328 in 2019. This was a 34% increase from 2018 when there were 245 public adoptions. The number of public adoptions continued to increase in 2020: there were 353 public adoptions in 2020, which was an 8% increase from 2019.

In 2019, there were 31 intercountry adoptions in Idaho, which was a 94% increase from 2018. The number declined in 2020: there were 15 intercountry adoptions in 2020, which was a 52% decrease from 2019.

Idaho only provided the number of public adoptions in their returned survey. The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare submitted the number of public adoptions, which was based on the state fiscal year.

This report used the number of outgoing cases reported by CSP²⁵ as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. The report used the number of public adoptions reported in AFCARS data because AFCARS data is based on the federal fiscal year, which aligns more closely with the calendar year. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

KANSAS

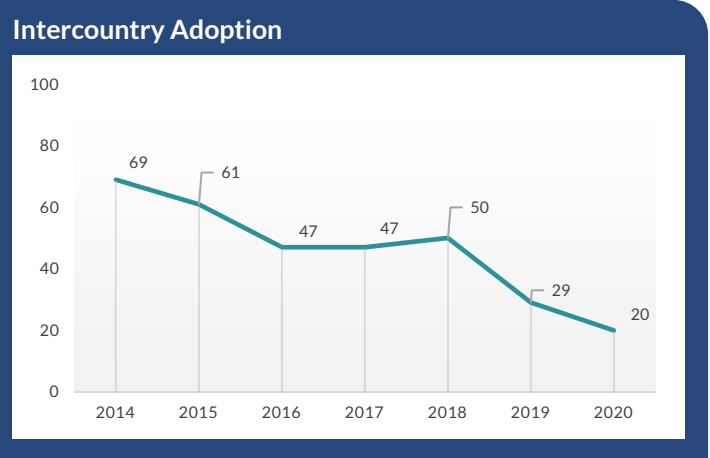

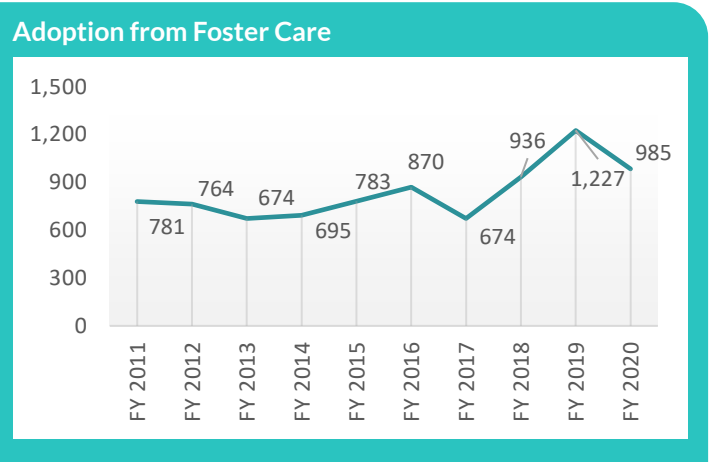

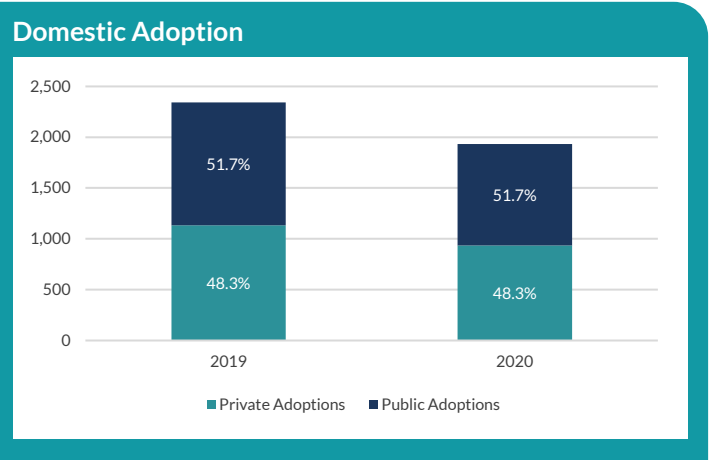

In Kansas, the total number of domestic adoptions was 2,342 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 48% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 52%. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 18% in 2020: there were 1,932 domestic adoptions in 2020. Private adoptions comprised 48% of domestic adoptions, and public adoptions 52%.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 1,227 in 2019. This was a 31% increase from 2018 when there were 936 public adoptions. The number of public adoptions declined in 2020: there were 985 public adoptions in 2020, which was a 20% decrease from 2019.

In 2019, there were 29 intercountry adoptions in Kansas, which was a 42% decrease from 2018. The number further declined in 2020: there were 20 intercountry adoptions in 2020, which was a 31% decrease from 2019.

Kansas only provided the total number of public adoptions in their returned survey. The Department of Children and Families submitted the number of public adoptions for each state fiscal year. The total number of domestic adoptions in 2019 was obtained from the Kansas Judicial Branch website (district court caseload statistics; <https://www.kscourts.org/About-the-Courts/District-Courts/District-Court-Caseload-Statistics>). The number of private adoptions in 2019 was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

The total number of private adoptions and domestic adoptions in 2020 was estimated using the figures for 2019 and the number of public adoptions in 2020. The ratio for the number of public adoptions in 2020 to the number of public adoptions in 2019 was computed. This ratio was applied in the estimation of the number of private adoptions and domestic adoptions in 2020 (i.e., the number of private adoptions in 2019 divided by the computed ratio; the number of domestic adoptions in 2019 divided by the computed ratio).

MISSISSIPPI

In Mississippi, the total number of domestic adoptions was 1,116 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 36% of domestic adoptions. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 17% in 2020. There were 927 domestic adoptions in 2020.

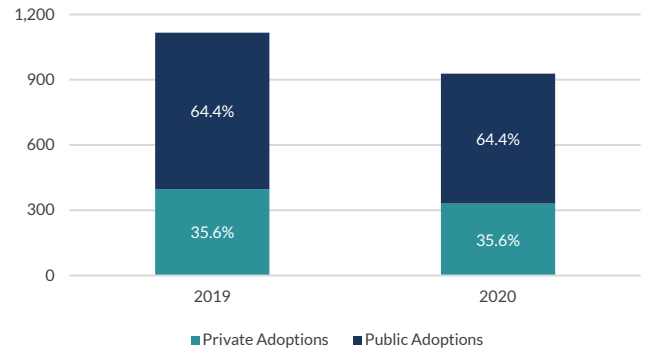

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 719 in 2019. This was a 67% increase compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care declined by 17% in 2020: 597 children were adopted from foster care in 2020.

In 2019, there were 22 intercountry adoptions in Mississippi, which was a 21% decline from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions further declined in 2020: there were 14 intercountry adoptions, which was a 36% decline compared to 2019.

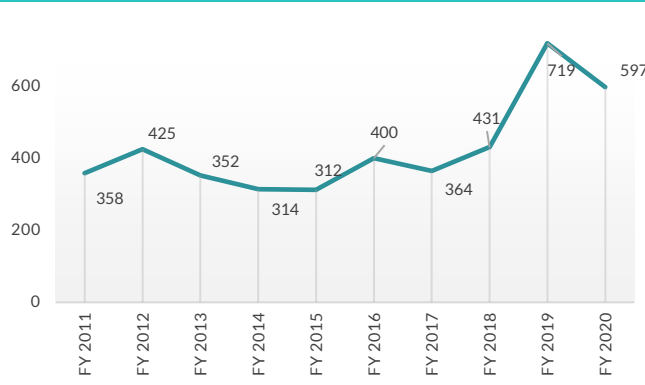

Mississippi did not return the survey, and the research team could not locate any information on the number of adoptions in the state. In order to estimate the total number of domestic adoptions, data for 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2014, derived from previous research³¹, was used. The number of private adoptions for each year was divided by the number of public adoptions to obtain a proportion for each year. The proportions were averaged to obtain an average proportion across these four discontinuous years. The number of public adoptions, which was obtained from AFCARS data, was multiplied by this average proportion to estimate the total number of domestic adoptions. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from this estimated total number of domestic adoptions.

The December 2020 report is accessible at <https://dss.mo.gov/re/pdf/csmr/1220-childrens-services-management-reports.pdf>. This gives the number of public adoptions in 2019 as 1,828; in 2020, as 1,744.

MONTANA

In Montana, the total number of domestic adoptions was 924 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 48% of domestic adoptions. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 20% in 2020. There were 739 domestic adoptions in 2020.

It was estimated that 49% of private adoptions were by stepparents in 2019: there were 216 stepparent adoptions within private adoptions. The number of stepparent adoptions was estimated to be 72 in 2020, making up 23% of private adoptions.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 482 in 2019. This was a 22% increase compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care declined by 10% in 2020: 432 children were adopted from foster care in 2020.

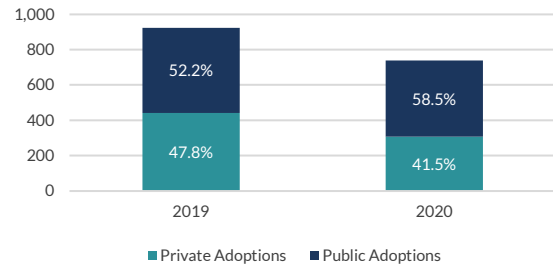

In 2019, there were five intercountry adoptions in Montana, which was a 79% decline from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions increased in 2020: there were seven intercountry adoptions, which was a 40% increase compared to 2019.

The Child and Family Services Division under the Department of Public Health and Human Services returned the survey, providing the number of stepparent, private, public and domestic adoptions. However, the figures were based on the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) placements. As a result, the research team decided to use the number of incoming cases reported by CSP³³ as the estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. The report used AFCARS data for the number of public adoptions. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

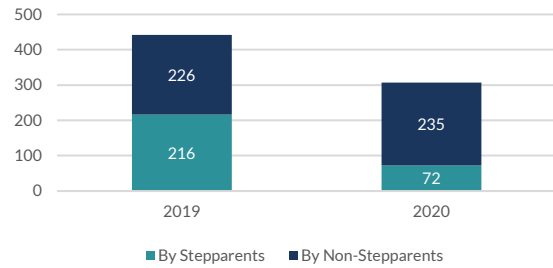

To estimate the proportion of stepparent adoptions, the report used the proportion available from the returned survey, which was based on ICPC placements.

The Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) returned the survey with data on the total number of domestic adoptions, public adoptions, and private adoptions. However, the research decided to use the number of outgoing cases reported by CSP³⁷ as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions instead of the DHHS number. There was a large discrepancy between the numbers provided by the DHHS and the CSP, and the research team chose the CSP figure, which was more consistent with the figures reported in prior reports.³⁸ The report used AFCARS data for its number of public adoptions. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

This dashboard is accessible at <https://www.pacourts.us/news-and-statistics/research-and-statistics/dashboard-table-of-contents/dependency-dashboard-statewide>. This gives the number of public adoptions in 2019 as 2,619; in 2020, as 1,942.

RHODE ISLAND

In Rhode Island, the total number of domestic adoptions was 332 in 2019. Private adoptions made up 45% of domestic adoptions. The total number of domestic adoptions declined by 41% in 2020. There were 195 domestic adoptions in 2020.

According to AFCARS data, the number of public adoptions was 184 in 2019. This was a 28% decline compared to 2018. The number of children adopted from foster care further declined by 17% in 2020: 152 children were adopted from foster care in 2020.

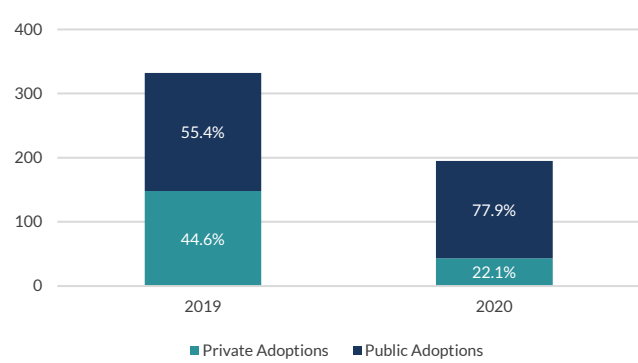

In 2019, there were four intercountry adoptions in Rhode Island, which was a 56% decline from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions did not change in 2020: there were four intercountry adoptions.

The Rhode Island Family Court provided the total number of domestic adoptions, and the Department of Children, Youth and Families (DCYF) submitted the number of public adoptions. However, the total number of domestic adoptions reported by the Family Court appeared to be significantly low in comparison to the figures reported in prior reports.⁴⁸ As a result, the research team decided to use the number of incoming cases reported by CSP⁴⁹ as its estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions. Since CSP data is based on a calendar year, the research team decided to use the number of public adoptions reported by AFCARS data. AFCARS data is based on the federal fiscal year, and it aligns more closely with the calendar year than the state fiscal year, which was the basis of the data submitted by the DCYF. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

In 2019, there were three intercountry adoptions in Vermont, which was a 40% decline from 2018. The number of intercountry adoptions further declined in 2020: there was only one intercountry adoption.

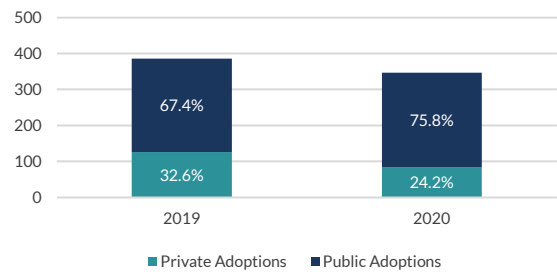

The survey was returned by Lund, a non-profit organization in Vermont, in collaboration with the Department for Children and Families, Family Services Division, with data on the total domestic adoptions, public adoptions, private adoptions, and stepparent adoptions. However, the research team decided to use the number of incoming cases reported by CSP⁵⁴ as the estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions because the number provided in the survey appeared to be low compared to the figures reported in prior reports.⁵⁵ AFCARS data was used for the number of public adoptions in this report. The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

To estimate the proportion of stepparent adoptions, the report used the percentage available from the returned survey. This proportion was applied to the computed number of private adoptions.

Wisconsin did not return the survey. The total number of domestic adoptions was initially collected from the Wisconsin Courts Caseload Summary reports for 2019 and 2020.⁵⁸ These reports provided statistics on adoption case dispositions. According to the reports, there were 2,720 adoption case dispositions in 2019 and 2,162 in 2020. The research team decided to use the number of outgoing cases from the CSP⁵⁹ as the estimate for the total number of domestic adoptions; these figures better conformed to data reported in prior reports.⁶⁰

The number of public adoptions was obtained from the Wisconsin Department of Children & Families Out-of-Home Care Dashboard.⁶¹ The number of private adoptions was computed by subtracting the number of public adoptions from the total number of domestic adoptions.

APPENDIX B: SURVEY INSTRUMENT

Adoption by the Numbers

This questionnaire focuses on the number of domestic adoptions in the United States. Please do not report on any intercountry adoptions.

If you do not have an exact count, please provide an estimated figure. If needed, please refer to one of the following sources: 1) previous year's data; 2) provisional data; 3) judgment of your state adoption experts; 4) summaries assembled from adoption agencies; or 5) another source you consider reliable. You may also provide an estimated range (e.g., 200-250). When you provide an estimated figure or range, please describe the method used for estimation.

Please specify whether the figure you provide is an exact count or an estimate. Write down "C" for count and "E" for estimate in the column, "Count or Estimate". Along with the numbers, please provide the specific sources of the numbers. If needed, please attach any reports, technical documents, or related materials you used to derive your counts or estimates.

If you cannot answer a given question, please leave the corresponding space blank.
